Project Information

Title:	Promoting Maritime ECVET Actions
Project Number:	2014-1-FI01-KA202-000828
Year:	2014
Project Type:	Partnerships
Status:	granted
Country:	FI-Finland
Marketing Text:	MariePRO aims to smooth the way for the Maritime Education and Training (MET) institutions towards implementing ECVET, the European Credit System for Vocational Education and Training. The ECVET system allows mutual recognition for credits gained in different European countries, opening doors for increased student mobility.
Summary:	The actions of the project include examining the differences between vocational MET in the partner countries, Finland, Germany, Italy, Malta, and the UK. Based on the results, a Catalogue of Best Practices on ECVET will be produced to provide concrete tools for MET institutions. Further, an example syllabus for protection of the marine environment will be drafted. This is to pave the way for harmonization of syllabus contents in practice.

Catalogue of Best Practices on ECVET implementation in the maritime and benchmarking fields provides success and benchmarking stories on ECVET for the use of the maritime and other VET institutions. The examples of ECVET in practice that have been included in the report have been produced to show the different ways that ECVET is being applied across sectors and countries in the EU. In some instances the initial vision for ECVET is realised - student exchanges, in other cases ECVET is used as a benchmarking tool to integrate learning and industrial requirements to make more labour relevant training courses, and in other cases new qualifications all together have been designed. The key features of the examples in this report is that they are all ECVET compliant and showcase different, innovative and effective approaches to implementing ECVET that other institutions can learnfrom. Sample Memorandum of Understanding and Learning Agreement are also provided.

Survey report on syllabus differences between MET 2016.pdf

http://www.adam-europe.eu/prj/12188/prd/2/1/Survey%20report%20on%20syllabus%20differences%20between%20MET%202016.pdf
Survey report on the syllabus differences between maritime VET institutions in the partner countries describes overall framework of MET, i.e., maritime institutes and training programmes as well as curricula of maritime institutes (incl. responsibilities & processes of planning), and other aspects relevant to maritime education and training, i.e., process of certification to become an officer, onboard training practices, e.g., who issues and who assesses the certificate in the partner countries. These aspects have been examined against the national framework of education (incl. traditions & beliefs) and the VET structures and practices of the individual countries. The summary report concludes with the views of MET actors on the need for and their visions of harmonised maritime education and training.

Product 'Example syllabus on Marine Environmental Awareness'

Title:	Example syllabus on Marine Environmental Awareness
Product Type:	program or curricula
Marketing Text:	MariePRO aims to show the differences between MET institutions, provide channels of interactions between European MET institutes, and pave the way for harmonization of syllabus contents in practice, providing the maritime VET actors in the partner countries as well as elsewhere in Europe with tools and preparedness to take actual steps towards implementing ECVET in their everyday activities.
Description:	Example syllabus for protection of the marine environment (named as “Example syllabus on Marine Environment Awareness Course” based on partners’ discussions and decision) provides a course outline as an instrument to implement a course on environment awareness, taking into account all maritime environment legislation. The course offers two options, a 2day programme as a refresher course for the seafarers who have gone through the IMO course and are familiar with most of the updates; and a 5day programme for incorporation into cadet education and training programme. The course provided follows the principles of ECVET Recommendation.
