SAMIN: Taking into account migrants needs in terms of VET

CONTEXT

Migrants in all of the countries of the SAMIN project face substantial disadvantages when it comes to vocational education and training and access to the job market.

TRANSFER

In 2013, SAMIN was elaborated as a « transfer of innovation » project within the Lifelong Learning Programme of the European Union. It transfers the FIBA project developed by ESTA Bildungswerk: a German innovative combination providing support about career choices and vocational training for young Turkish.

SAMIN Objectives

This Transfer of Innovation's objective is to empower trainers, teachers and educators working on Vocational Education and Training of vulnerable migrants. The empowerment of these actors, and improving partnership work strengthens migrants support.

SAMIN informs about vocational, education and training (VET) grassroots practices in several European countries. A long term objective is to favour the exchanges between the labour market and training organisations and to favour the professional and social inclusion of vulnerable migrants.
