Modules and tools

Since June had all partners worked hard to get the modules and ready to be presented in Copenhagen and afterward to be tested.

The draft versions of each module and tool were presented by each drafting leader and discussed by all partners. For each module and tool it was concluded by project manager Cristian Rocha, LNEG how it should be finalized for testing

The spice of good training material is good and understandable examples and minimums criteria to ensure that were defined

- The example should be simple
- Should be clear what the example is
- Why is it considered a good example?
- Where can the user find more information?

Testing the training material

Rainer Pamming, Vienna University of Technology showed how the training material should be tested. The test will take place in three areas

1. Training for SInnDesign Trainers
2. Training for Trainees - professionals or students
3. Demonstration workshops

Copenhagen School of Design and Technology (KEA) presented a video recording of a preliminary test of the training material among 100 students from level 5 of education. The results were positive and the student could see potential of using the tools in their projects in the future

Irina Celades López and Teresa Ros Dosdá from ITC Spain presented the design training material format, logo etc. and how the materials are reviewed during the period of its finalization.

Finally José Neto from WeAreMateria and the responsible web developer of the SInnDesign website presented on line and via Skype the set up and its function and got feedback from the partners

Even all participants worked hard and long time there were time for tasting traditional Danish winter and Christmas food at a very local restaurant
