In order to give a recognition to companies investing in the basic professional training of their young adult employees, especially those needing to recover a first vocational qualification, the Second Chance project has developed the Chance Giver label.

Second Chance project

The project's main goal was to target the social and labour market exclusion of unqualified people by developing and implementing a new alternative training opportunity leading to a Vocational Education and Training (VET) qualification.

Target group

The primary target group of the Second Chance model is young adults without a VET qualification, aged up to and including 26 years. Additionally, the model meets the training needs of disadvantaged adults with no or low levels of formal qualifications.

The training model

The main outcome of the project is a comprehensive training plan that enables facilitation and preparation of the target group to access training and lifelong learning, through:

- initial assessment of soft and basic skills;
- modularization and articulation in learning units of the Learning pathway, with recognition of partial qualifications;
- flexibility and personalization of the training plan;
- workplace learning throughout the training period;
- improvement of basic vocational skills to empower and reintegrate trainees in the educational and professional environment.

Second Chance training

This is a chance for young people without a formal vocational education to recover basic skills, become self-empowered and benefit from a facilitated access to VET (Vocational Education and Training) qualifications.

Thanks to a modularised and personalized training programme, tailored to the needs of the target group and integrated with workplace learning, trainees will be prepared and guided in order to succeed in acquiring a VET qualification.

Take your chance and build your future today by profiting from the key features of the Second Chance training model:

- assessment of basic, personal, social and professional skills;
- development of self-awareness and motivation both at professional and personal level;
- opportunity to combine theory and practice through work place based training and learning;
- individualised programmes for the recovering of basic skills;
- elaboration of personalized career and learning strategies enabling a successful approach to training and working life;
- customized and consistent coaching along the training pathway.

Chance Giver label

The Chance Giver label is dedicated to companies that effectively support and facilitate the access of their low qualified employees to vocational training and qualifications.

Companies interested in acquiring the Chance Giver label, have to elaborate and fill in a self-evaluation grid based on the standards defined by the Second Chance consortium. Companies should then submit the self-evaluation grid to national Second Chance coordinators, who will check and validate it.
