Lifelong Learning Programme

Introduction

InterGen is a two year international project, which began in October 2010. The project involves partners in Austria (AT), Germany (DE), Sweden (SE), Spain (ES), Slovakia (SK) and the UK. We are developing a new training package to support Intergenerational mentoring within the Vocational Educational Training (VET) structure of each partner country: one-to-one sessions where older people can spend time with children who need support.

As a key part of the project, each partner identified the VET structure within their country and worked with a range of relevant organisations in their local and regional areas. The aim was to ensure that our project would develop a training package linked to current needs and society and made freely available to all, whilst also encouraging each cohort of users to expand on their experience by continuing the cycle of learning with a group of successors. We made sure that news about the project would reach a wide range of organisations and individuals, who could bring their expertise and ideas to the project, and hopefully use its results as a base for further activity.

This report provides an overview of the organisations and individuals that we have worked with through the lifetime of the InterGen project. We have not included the full contact details of the centres and individuals involved, at the request of many of them - the report will be freely available on the web, and many people prefer not to have their contact details published. Anyone who would like further information is asked to contact us via the main InterGen website, www.Intergen-project.eu , or directly to InterGen@pointeuropa.org.

Municipality of Feldbach

Feldbach is a small Austrian town situated in the south-eastern part of the Styria region (50 km from Graz). It has a population of 4,681. The town offers a number of facilities for children, families and older people such as a crèche for children aged 0-3 (Kinderkrippe Flohhupferl), 2 kindergartens for children aged 3-6, 2 primary schools and after school care, schools for children aged 10-14, as well as colleges for students aged 14-19. Moreover, there is a residential home for seniors and mobile health and care for older people still living at home. In addition Feldbach runs a youth centre and several facilities for children and adults with special needs.

Education and Culture DG

Lifelong Learning Programme

The town was chosen as a partner in the InterGen project since two of the institutions mentioned above have already gained experience in intergenerational projects, namely the crèche and the residential home for seniors which are both located in the same building. Moreover, it proved successful to engage the manager of the "Flohhupferl" crèche as anchor person for the project because she has a wide network with relevant people and institutions in the community.

Feldbach is also a district capital. The mayor Kurt Deutschmann and council members Christian Fürntrath and Manuela Leitgeb support the dissemination and implementation of the project.

Seniors' Committee Feldbach

An active member of the Committee, Monika Schöberl, supports the implementation of the project and takes an active part in the InterGen group to evaluate project and material on a local level.
