Zusammenfassung: The project 'Training for the Future in CEE countries' aims to train the VET trainers of partner organizations and transfer practice oriented training for graduating classes, career-starter, trainees and company managers around the topic of sustainability with their assistance. The characteristic of the partnership is CEE based. All the partners are active in different CEE countries as vocational and adult trainer organization. The present innovation transfer project aims to import a new vocational training course in three new member states (Romania, Bulgaria, Turkey). The owner of the transferred training materials (Hungarian partner) is experienced in international project management and tested the training package in the framework of a previous Leonardo pilot project (Training for the Future).

Beschreibung: In order to achieve the overall aim of the project, which is to educate present and future managers and decision makers to be able to steer their organizations towards sustainable ways of operation and by doing so contribute to the aims set out at the Gothenburg European Council, the specific aims are to:

1. Carry out a needs analysis in the partner countries to develop and actualize existing training materials;
2. Transfer the training materials into CEE countries' VET system;
3. Make the training materials available in the languages of the participating countries (Bulgarian, Turkish, Romanian);
4. Train the VET trainers of partner organizations' to be qualified to hold similar sustainability further education trainings in their countries and increase their presentation skills and competences in the field of sustainability and in supervising small-group trainings;
5. Make the often-used terms of "sustainable development" and "sustainability" easily understandable for present and future managers and decision makers, provide them with examples of best practice (e.g. for resource efficiency, environmental savings, etc.), and equip them with tools that they can use in practice to implement the ideas learnt;

Target groups

1. graduating classes, trainees, career-starter, company managers (especially environmental engineers, managers and economists).

2. VET trainers in CEE countries

Link to European priorities

The above mentioned aims (especially the 2nd 3rd and 4th aims of the project) are linked to European priorities of the call with translate and transfer new vocational education training materials to different VET systems which include innovative contents and training practices for target countries. Besides through train the trainers activity and increasing the presentation skills and competences of involved VET trainers the project will contribute to develop the quality and attractiveness of VET systems and practices.

Romanian Summer Academy

Datum 02.07.2011

Beschreibung The training will use both formal and non-formal types of learning, however, a greater emphasis is placed on the latter to make the training learner-centered. We also believe that by actively involving participants they will assume more responsibility and later will want to improve their skills independently, too. In turn, this will help to spread the idea of life long education.

A variety of innovative methods will be used in the teaching apart from face to face teaching and lecturing. These include the following:

Use of group work to enhance communication among participants and through this an exchange of information and best practice. Groups will be given case studies and asked to develop solutions together. We believe that because of their varied background (different companies, age, different studies, etc.), participants will be able to come up with more innovative and systematic solutions to problems, and later on will apply similar techniques in their work.

Participant presentations will be used to give them a chance to share existing knowledge and pass on examples of best practice to one another.

Workshops to encourage discussion and debate among participants and also to provide a forum for them to share problems, achievements, positive and negative experience.

Participants will be assessed at the end of the training through individual project work. They will be asked to identify their own specific interest and select the area where they could (and will) apply the theory and practice acquired during the training.

Participants will be given the opportunity to visit and spend some time at companies to provide them with practical, work-related experience as a background to their studies. It will be encouraged that in the case of participants who have not had previous work experience, these visits develop into apprenticeship.
