Résumé: In the project, the distinction between basic supervising skills and advanced supervising abilities is clearly defined and the problem about how a successful police supervisor should be is evaluated in the terms of scientific point of view. By this project, it is aimed to develop the supervising skills of the newly graduates of the Police Academy, which gives education to supervisor candidates. In the scope of the project it is desired for a police supervisor whose management skills have been developed to be able to supervise in the best way in every kind of organizations both in our country and abroad.

There will be studies and practices to improve management skills for the supervisors within the frame of a syllabus and a system that have been created by a scientific point of view. In fact, these efforts to improve management skills of the graduates of the Police Academy will not only affect the system of Turkish Security Force but also will be effective in foreign countries where the Turkish police also serves. Turkish police supervisors serve indifferent parts of the world under the UN forces. By this opportunity they work with different people from different nations. If they are trained by this project, they will have the chance to use management skills, improve and transfer them to other colleagues. Thereby this project is not only about personal improvement but also has a multicultural and international aspect. The syllabus, techniques and system for the project lean on scientific and modern criteria. The consequences of the project will be published both in Turkish and English. An internet site will be prepared professionally about the project. Besides CDs/DVDs, handbooks, books and scientific publications will inform people about the outputs of the project. These documents and publications will also be used as training materials. By seminars and conferences the consequences of the project will be discussed and conveyed to many people. A CD/DVD that includes methodology and learning materials will be prepared. The opportunities to broadcast the consequences of the project in the local or national media will be sought

Description: By this project, it is aimed to develop the supervising skills of the newly graduates of the Police Academy, which gives education to supervisor candidates. In the scope of the project it is desired for a police supervisor whose management skills have been developed to be able to supervise in the best way in every kind of organizations both in our country and abroad. This project will make a contribution to making the European economy capable to compete with others as mentioned in Lisbon Strategy. Besides it will provide developments of new ways in vocational training (VET) through transferring opinions, visions and cooperation with different countries on the basis of establishments. The ideals in Lisbon Strategy and Copenhagen Declarations like transforming, modernizing and adapting the educational and training system, in brief to make the transformed system as a reference all around the world are the main elements in the frame of the project.
